

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

[446]

VIII. Extract of a Letter concerning the Poifon of Henbane-Roots, from Dr. Patouillat, Physician at Toucy in France, to M. Geoffroy, F. R. S. and Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences at Paris, communicated to the ROYAL SOCIETY, London, by Sir Hans Sloane, Med. Reg. and Pres. R. S. Translated from the French by T. S. M. D. F. R. S.

February 9. 1737.

HE 26th of last Month, I was called to a Cot-tage very near Toucy; where I was surprised to find nine Persons together, all having the true Symptoms of being poison'd; with this Difference, that some were speechless, and shew'd no other Signs of Life than by Convulsions, Contortions of their Limbs, and the Rifus Sardonicus; all having their Eyes starting out of their Heads, and their Mouths drawn backwards on both Sides; others had all the Symptoms alike. However, five of them did now and then open their Mouths, but it was to utter Howlings: And whenever they express'd articulated Words, it feem'd as if they would prophefy. One, for Example, said, In a Month my Neighbour will lose a Cow: Another, In a little time you will see the Crown Pieces of fixty Pence at five Livres [100 d.] Among these nine Persons there was a Woman five Months gone with Child, a Child of two Years; four Boys of 9, 12, 15 and 18; and three Girls of 15, 17 and 19 Years of Age, who had all three the Misfortune fortune of the Green-sickness upon them at that Juncture of Time. The Madness of all these Patients was so complete, and their Agitations so violent, that in order to give one of them the Antidote, I was forced to employ six strong Men to hold him, while I was getting his Teeth asunder, to pour down the Remedy: And as they could not all be watch'd at once, one of the Boys got away, and ran to a Pond 100 Paces from the House, into which he leap'd; but as he was seen, he was soon taken out. You must be sensible, Sir, what Consusion I was in at so pressing a Juncture of Time.

[447]

Twas vain to examine those Wretches concerning the Nature of the Poison they had taken, as they were quite senseless. Happily the Father of the Family, by being absent, was free from this Mis-Of him I learn'd, that digging his Garden the preceding Day, he had found several Roots resembling common Parsnips; and having carried them home for Parsnips, they were boil'd in the Soop; and the unlucky Mistake was not apprehended, till the Children were in this dreadful State. fcribed to me the Plant, which he thought he had taken for Parsnips; whereupon I went into the Garden, in order to find and know what it was; but as it had no Leaves, I was obliged to derive the Knowledge of it from the Roots; and soon knew it to be the Henbane, which is a very strong Poison; and so much the more dangerous, as the Patients could give no Account of their Ailments, nor of the Quality of the Poison they had taken.

[448]

To the Boys I gave the Tartar. Stibiat. in so large a Dose, that the oldest took 45 Grains, and the others in Proportion.

For the Woman, I had recourse to Theriaca in a triple Dose; not thinking it safe to give her the Emetic, on account of her Pregnancy. I gave the same Remedy to the Child, by reason of its Tenderness.

To the Girls, besides the Theriaca, which they took in very large Doses, (having made use of sour Ounces of it) I gave warm Milk, wherein I dissolved Salt of Rue. The next Day I visited the Patients, and found them in a quite different Condition; for they had all recover'd the Use of their Reason, but remember'd nothing of what happen'd.

All this Day, every Object appear'd double to them, that is, upon looking at a Man, a Beast, or a Tree, they saw two.

I return'd to see them the next Day, and sound that the Symptoms were removed; but were succeeded by another altogether as surprising, to wit, all Objects appear'd to them as red as Scarlet. This last Symptom ceased gradually on the third Day, and since that Time they have made no Complaint.